

Supporting Online Faculty

A BRAINSTORMING SESSION

FACILITATED BY:
JASON LACHOWSKY
WEB CONTENT DEVELOPER

Introduction

- Web Content Developer position
- Background
 - Online methodologies
 - Web and multimedia design
 - Accessibility and universal design
 - Emerging technologies
- Currently
 - Needs assessment
 - Learning technologies
 - Learning styles
 - Instructional design

Top-Ten Teaching and Learning Issues, 2007

1. Establishing and supporting a culture of evidence
2. Demonstrating improvement of learning
3. Translating learning research into practice
4. Selecting appropriate models and strategies for e-learning
5. Providing tools to meet growing student expectations

Educause Quarterly, 2007 #3

Top-Ten Teaching and Learning Issues, 2007

6. Providing professional development and support to new audiences
7. Sharing content, applications, and application development
8. Protecting institutional data
9. Addressing emerging ethical challenges
10. Understanding the evolving role of academic technologists

Educause Quarterly, 2007 #3

Issue #4

- Selecting appropriate models and strategies for e-learning
 - Use of technology to support instructional mission
 - Matching tools with faculty needs
 - How can the infrastructure be improved to better support online learning?

Issue #5

- Providing tools to meet growing student expectations
 - “Net generation”
 - Web 2.0 Tools
 - ✦ Student Collaboration or more
 - Google Docs, Zoho, Buzzword
 - ✦ Networking
 - Ning

Issue #6

- Providing professional development and support to new audiences
 - Online Mentoring / Peer Review
 - What technology support do you need?
 - ✦ One-on-one consultation
 - ✦ Tegrity presentations, wikis, pod/vodcasting
 - Online Learning page
 - ✦ <http://online.inverhills.edu/>
 - ✦ Suggested improvements?

Issue #10

- Understanding the evolving role of academic technologists
 - Best practices
 - New trends / Student preferences
 - Increasing understanding of the institutional culture

Comments? Thoughts?

- Additional questions or concerns?

Thank you for attending!