Words with Friends

Is your mother-in-law always interrupting you? Are you unnerved by your boss's monotone and lack of direct eye contact? Why is your significant other so comfortable sharing personal secrets with complete strangers? Healthy relationships require communication, and this learning community will help you understand how people communicate and give you the tools to communicate effectively with all the people in your life. You will also cultivate your reading and writing skills as you learn about how to get the most out of your relationships. LCOM 0001-27 is a combination of ENG 99-27, READ 93-27, and COMM 1100-27. True Grit: Secrets of Success

There is a saying that life is 10% what happens to you and 90% how you feel about it. If you believe that, then you believe grit, the ability to keep going when things get tough, plays a huge role in success. In this Learning Community, we will study what makes people successful. Is it hard work? Attitude? Luck? Motivation? What makes someone keep going in spite of the odds while others give up at the first small set back? You will use what you learn about motivation to help you develop the grit you need to be successful in college. LCOM 0001-28 is a combination of courses READ 94-28 and ENG 99-28.

Write Now! The Power of Stories (Two Options Available)

We hear stories every day from people, in the media, recalled from childhood or other experiences. And we love stories! Why are stories so powerful? In this learning community, we will ask and answer this question by reading, writing about, and writing some powerful stories. Stories taken from journalism, fiction, film, biography, history, and our own lives will be the texts for the study of college writing and reading. English 1108 and Reading 1100 are complemented by English 99 for a powerful college experience!

Being Human

What is it that makes us human? Is it the development of bipedal locomotion? Language? The Oxford comma? Anthropology is the study of what makes us human, and culture is one of our most human attributes. This learning community introduces students to the anthropological sub-field of cultural anthropology while developing their academic writing skills and ability to think and read critically. Topics will include diverse expressions of gender, religion, language, family, marriage, art, and political and economic systems. Through cross-cultural examples from around the world, students will explore how culture makes us human. LCOM 0001-29 is a combination of ENG 1108-29 and ANTH 1110-29. These courses are selected as a single block of courses.
